In the spring of 1897 a "mad dog" scere was raised in London by a certain class of people who had a great commercial interest in raising "mad dog" scares (muzzle manufacturers). ance from a credulous public and a sensational press. The board of agriculture finally took the matter up and issued an order to the effect that all dogs appearing on the public highway should be tightly muzzled with a wire cage muzzle invented by the aforesaid manufacturers. During the first three mouths of the scare over 16,000 dogs were selzed in the streets as "vagabond strays," and not a single case of rabies was discovered among them.

It should be borne in mind that dogs, like men, are subject to certain diseases. They have their diseases of puppyhood and old age. They have their stomachie and nervous troubles just as we have and require intelligent them through these attacks. If dog owners would only take a more intellihear less of "mad dog" scares. One hundred and fifty pounds is allowed to start the band. How and where can instruments of any decent make be bought for the sum allowed? Who has to make up the deficiency The officer.

Fifty pounds is allowed for the se geants' mess. This is again insufficient, and the balance must be made good by either the officers or sergeants and of course as a rule it is the former. On an officer being posted to a regiment he has to provide himself with a complete set of barrack room furniture and carpet, which he has to move at his own expense whenever and where he is shifted on promotion or goes to schools of instruction unless in the latter case he prefers to hire from local tradesmen at an exorbitant rate.

An officer has to pay for the cost of all carriage of the lightest mess equip ment and baggage at maneuvers, and no matter how much his clothing and uniform may be damaged he gets no compensation to repair the loss or damage. Also no sort of camp equipment is provided, and he is expected to buy this out of his own pocket and pay for Its transport.

The government allowance for forage is well known to be fasufficient to pay for the keep of a horse. Who pays the difference? Again the officer. The government allowance for fuel and light is also on the most parsimo nious lines, and again the officer has to bear the expense.
